

MULTIJURISDICTIONAL PRACTICE IN THE U.S.: IN-HOUSE COUNSEL PRO BONO

Multijurisdictional practice rules pose a significant obstacle for many in-house attorneys participating in pro bono activities. Numerous in-house attorneys, though admitted and in good standing in one or more U.S. jurisdictions, are not licensed in the states in which they currently work. The practice rules in all but a few states permit in-house counsel licensed in other U.S. jurisdictions to represent their in-state employer, often through a registration or similar certification process, but many of these rules limit representation to the employer-client.¹ Some states provide pro bono exemptions, allowing non-locally licensed in-house counsel (“registered in-house counsel”)² to provide pro bono. However, a large number do not expressly permit these lawyers to practice in pro bono matters. And many of those jurisdictions that do subject registered in-house counsel to a number of restrictions, such as mandating that pro bono legal services be provided only in association with an approved organization or under the supervision of a locally licensed lawyer.

In recent years, a number of states have re-evaluated their rules and amended them to reduce or eliminate limitations on in-house pro bono service. More states are following suit. Currently, four jurisdictions have adopted provisions that eliminate restrictions and permit registered in-house counsel to engage in pro bono broadly while protecting clients and requiring lawyer competency – Illinois, New York, Virginia, and Wisconsin.

Growth of In-House Pro Bono

Over the past decade, in-house pro bono has grown tremendously. Many of the Fortune 500 companies and a majority of the Fortune 100 companies have either set up or are moving to establish formal pro bono programs for the lawyers in their legal departments. In addition, lawyers in smaller companies and legal departments engage in pro bono legal services through opportunities organized by Corporate Pro Bono (CPBO), ACC chapters, legal service providers, bar associations, and other organizations.

¹ In 2002, the American Bar Association (ABA) amended ABA Model Rule 5.5 Unauthorized Practice Of Law; Multijurisdictional Practice Of Law to authorize in-house counsel, licensed and in good standing in at least one U.S. jurisdiction, to practice for their employers without becoming admitted to the local bar and without registering or obtaining certification from the bar or court. Several jurisdictions have adopted the amended model rule. Most others have adopted rules that provide that non-locally licensed in-house counsel may work for their employer, but require them to register or obtain certification to do so. Only two jurisdictions provide no exemption for non-locally licensed in-house counsel.

² For simplicity, this paper refers to all non-locally licensed in-house attorneys who practice in a jurisdiction that has adopted Model Rule 5.5 or a similar practice rule as “registered in-house counsel.”

The pool of registered in-house counsel who may participate in pro bono numbers in the thousands. In the following select jurisdictions, registered in-house counsel authorized to work in state for their employer number:

- more than 250 in Arizona
- more than 1800 in California
- more than 800 in Connecticut
- more than 350 in Delaware
- more than 650 in Florida
- more than 500 in Illinois
- more than 350 in Massachusetts
- more than 650 in New York
- more than 350 in Pennsylvania
- more than 900 in Virginia

Actions to Change Practice Rules

In recent years, there have been a number of efforts to encourage states to change their practice rules so that registered in-house counsel may engage in pro bono services more freely.

State Practice Rules

In-house counsel in Virginia worked to amend Virginia’s practice rules to allow non-locally licensed in-house counsel authorized to work for their employer to also provide pro bono services. In 2006, Virginia adopted a rule that allowed its registered in-house counsel to provide pro bono services but only in partnership with an approved organization and under the supervision of a Virginia licensed lawyer among other restrictions. These limitations made pro bono practice impractical for many registered in-house counsel and limited the amount of pro bono provided to those in need in Virginia.

In the spring of 2010, following an access to justice summit hosted by the Virginia Supreme Court, lawyers from the Virginia State Bar, Virginia Bar Association, and the Association of Corporate Counsel worked with CPBO to submit a proposed amendment to the practice rules that the Virginia Supreme Court passed in 2011. Now, registered in-house attorneys may provide pro bono broadly, subject to the Virginia Rules of Professional Conduct.³

Other states, including Connecticut, Florida, Iowa, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Jersey, and Ohio, as well as the District of Columbia have made recent changes to their practice rules that allow for greater in-house pro bono involvement. However, unlike in Virginia, the rules in these jurisdictions impose several restrictions that narrow in-house pro bono engagement and limit the number of clients served.

In April 2013, Illinois, like Virginia, amended its existing registered in-house counsel provision to remove these types of restrictions and permit Illinois registered in-house counsel to provide pro bono broadly. In December 2013, New York adopted a similarly broad rule, and Wisconsin followed suit by removing unnecessary restrictions effective January 2017. Now, four states – Illinois, New York, Virginia, and Wisconsin – have practice rules that permit registered in-house counsel to provide pro bono legal services without unnecessary limitations and while protecting clients and requiring lawyer competency. These provisions serve as models for other jurisdictions.

Conference of Chief Justices

In July 2012, the Conference of Chief Justices (CCJ) passed Resolution 11 “In Support of Practice Rules Enabling In-House Counsel to Provide Pro Bono Legal Services” asking CCJ members to “consider promoting the expansion of pro bono legal services, including by amending the practice rules to allow non-locally licensed in-house counsel who are permitted to work for their employer to also provide pro bono legal services subject to the local rules of professional conduct.”

Current Status of In-House Pro Bono Exceptions and Rules

Below is a jurisdiction-by-jurisdiction⁴ chart of the multijurisdictional practice rules applicable to non-locally licensed in-house counsel providing pro bono with a brief description of the terms of the rule and a link to the actual provisions. In sum, the number of jurisdictions that currently:

- permit in-house counsel who are not locally licensed (“registered in-house counsel”) to work for their employer under an unauthorized practice of law exception: 49;
- allow registered in-house counsel to engage in pro bono legal services broadly, subject to the local professional rules of conduct: 4;
- allow registered in-house counsel to provide pro bono legal services, only if “associated with” or “affiliated with” approved legal services organizations or under the supervision of a locally licensed attorney: 4;
- allow registered in-house counsel to provide pro bono legal services, only if “associated with” or “affiliated with” approved legal services organizations: 15;
- allow registered in-house counsel to provide pro bono legal services, only if “associated with” or “affiliated with” approved legal services organizations and under the supervision of a locally licensed attorney: 5;
- are silent with regard to registered in-house counsel providing pro bono legal services but allow out-of-state lawyers, including in-house counsel, to provide pro bono legal services subject to a number of restrictions, which may include “associated with” or “affiliated with” approved legal services organizations, under the supervision of a locally licensed lawyer, and other limitations: 12; and
- are silent with regard to registered in-house counsel and out-of-state lawyers providing pro bono legal services: 11.

Options That Do Not Require Local Bar Admission

Out-of-State Attorney Provisions

A number of jurisdictions allow attorneys who are licensed out-of-state, including in-house counsel, to provide pro bono. Non-locally licensed in-house counsel in jurisdictions that do not expressly permit their pro bono participation may practice under these provisions. However, many of these rules impose more restrictions than those adopted specifically for in-house counsel, including being “associated with” or “affiliated with” approved legal services organizations and/or working under the supervision of a locally licensed attorney, as well as time limitations (as short as 18 months).

Certain Pro Bono Matters

In-house counsel located in jurisdictions that do not expressly permit their involvement in pro bono may nonetheless be able to perform certain types of pro bono matters. These attorneys will need to focus on pro bono options that do not technically involve the practice of law, include practicing under the close supervision of an attorney licensed within the jurisdiction, or for which admission to the state bar is not otherwise required.

Some examples are:

- Dispute Resolution
- Intake and Screening
- Special Administrative Cases (including, but not limited to: Immigration, IRS, Medicaid, Military Discharge Upgrade, School Board Hearings, Social Security Benefits, Unemployment Insurance, Veterans’ Appeals, Welfare, Special Education)

Please note that while these general categories of work may not be considered the practice of law for the purpose of local bar rules, attorneys should consult the rules and counsel in the state in which they wish to do pro bono work. Some states consider the practice of law to include any and all work performed by a lawyer for a client, and thus, might not agree that this work does not require local admission. Also, be aware that under some policies, in order to qualify for the protections of malpractice insurance, an attorney must be in a lawyer-client relationship. In these circumstances, if a disgruntled recipient of services decides to sue the attorney, that attorney may not be able to argue that he/she was not practicing law for purposes of admission, but that he/she was for purposes of liability coverage.

Pro hac vice admission is also available to in-house attorneys interested in doing pro bono work on litigation matters, but is often a cumbersome and time consuming process.

In an effort to share interests, ideas, and best practices learned from experiences like those in Virginia, and to create a broad-based approach to this obstacle, CPBO, a global project of Pro Bono Institute designed to support in-house counsel in their efforts to do pro bono work, has formed a task force composed of in-house counsel from jurisdictions impacted by these restrictive rules. Legal departments and in-house lawyers interested in participating in or learning more about the task force should contact CPBO's Director at cpbo@probonoinst.org.
